PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Canada's Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) regulations are complex, encompassing diverse industries and hazards. With workplace injuries costing Canada $26.8 billion annually, these regulations are vital. They have contributed to a 70% decrease in work-related fatalities since 1976. However, their complexity, with over 1,000 pages of federal regulations alone, poses implementation challenges for employers, highlighting the need for ongoing education and support.

This certified program is designed to provide you with an in-depth understanding of Canada's intricate and evolving Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) regulations and compliance requirements. Covering both federal regulations such as the Canada Labour Code Part II and provincial laws including Alberta's OHS Act and British Columbia's Workers Compensation Act, this program will help you attain a solid grasp of the legislative framework on Canada's OHS principles, the General Duty Clause, and the responsibilities of employers and employees.

In addition to legal principles, this program will provide you with practical insights into managing worker compensation, handling serious injury incidents, and ensuring compliance with reporting requirements. You will also gain insights into how to develop and implement effective OHS policies, procedures, and training programs that align with the relevant legislation. Furthermore, you will learn how to conduct workplace hazard assessments, accident investigations, and incident reporting in compliance with the applicable regulations.

Throughout the program, you will learn about best practices in safety management, key performance indicators for OHS, and the intricacies of building effective health and safety management systems. By the end of this program, you will possess the knowledge and skills necessary to proficiently navigate and comply with OHS regulations, manage workplace safety, and mitigate compliance risks. This will empower you to foster a safer work environment, ensure legal adherence, and enhance your organization's overall safety performance.

Upon successful completion of the program, you will attain the Certification in Canada Occupational Health and Safety (OHS) Regulations and Compliance. This certification will elevate your professional standing and demonstrate your proficiency in the Canadian OHS regulatory framework and effective compliance strategies, enhancing workplace safety and ensuring legal adherence.
